The rejection of the claims under 35 USC 112, second paragraph has been withdrawn. The rejections of the claims over Wintersdorff in view of Chen and Gonzalez in view of Chen have been withdrawn. The indication of allowable subject matter in claims 24 and 25 have been withdrawn in view of a closer look at McGlynn.

Claims 1, 3, 8-11 allowed.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 14, 20-23 and 25 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over McGlynn (6,322,829) in view of Chen (5,817,381).

McGlynn discloses savory fillings containing oil or fat, water and emulsion stabilizers that include protein (see column 3, lines 48-49 and line 59 and column 5, lines 13-25). The fat ranges from 10-60 wt% (column 3, lines 51-55) and the water ranges from 10-60% (column 4, lines 3-6). The viscosity of the composition is shown at column 6, lines 19-25. Although starch is mentioned as an emulsion stabilizer, it is only one choice among many others (column 5, lines 13-22). The use of sugar in the composition as a humectant is discouraged because of the sweet taste (column 4, lines 33-47). The claims appear from McGlynn in the recitation of the inclusion of an insoluble fiber. Chen teaches cellulose fibers for use in foods (see Table 2). In particular cellulose is described as a thickening agent, a fat substitute and emulsion stabilizer for salad dressing. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to fortify the salad dressing of McGlynn with the fibers of Chen in order to maintain and control the viscosity of the salad dressing. It is appreciated that the fiber dimensions are not mentioned but it would have been obvious to control the fiber dimensions of Chen in order to provide a smooth product. It is appreciated that the use of the product as encapsulated in dough or as suitable for freezing, refrigeration and heating in a microwave oven is not mentioned. McGlynn teaches that fillings are known in foods like pasties, pastas and pies (column 1, lines 17-19). To utilize the filling of McGlynn in a dough for freezing, refrigeration and microwave heating would have been an obvious extensions of the uses contemplated by McGlynn.
